Transforming content using whiteboard technology can help students who are visual and kinesthetic learners to better grasp material. In this session, Dr. Stec will help faculty learn how to effectively whiteboard as a mechanism for differentiated instruction and alternative assessment. We will start with several examples of whiteboarding and help ideate around how faculty can integrate this strategy into their courses. Dr. Stec will provide tips and tools for getting started with whiteboarding and give faculty the opportunity to create their own presentations. Faculty should come prepared with their devices to get the most from this exploration in creativity for the classroom.
